Faith, Learning, and Vocation: The Intersection of Science and Christian Theology

In Christ All Things Hold Together is a new LCMS publication addressing the intersection of science and Christian theology. Drawing from fields including history and philosophy it investigates how science and theology can be cohesively aligned while seeking to understand God's creation. Our interdisciplinary discussions will be led by faculty in theology (John Oberdeck), the natural sciences (Michael Young), and philosophy (Angus Menuge), but will be enriched by participants from any discipline interested in studying the world within a worldview that is both faithful and intellectually meaningful.

Includes lunch for faculty and staff who register. Register by September 23 to receive a free book (pick up in R008).

Four Wednesdays, 12:00-1:00pm in the Terrace Room. Session dates and descriptions below. Read before the session.

- * September 30: Intro and Theological Foundations (Read Intro and Chapter 1)
- * October 14: Historical and Philosophical Issues (Read Chapters 2-3)
- * October 28: Biblical Knowledge and Scientific Knowledge (Read Chapter 4)
- * November 11: Practical Applications (Read Chapter 5)
