Driving a Point Home: Meadow Soprano Vs. the Snow Queen

Growing up, I often heard jokes about lady drivers; probably everybody in our culture does. Although I have two sisters (now eight years old and sixteen). I never thought much about them until I heard someone making fun of a woman driver in front of my little sister when she was fourteen. I knew she was just a year away from driver's ed classes and two years away from legal driving age. I wondered if these kinds of jokes would affect her self-image and maybe make her less confident in her own abilities.

Could these kinds of jokes even cause accidents? I wondered. Wouldn't a nervous driver
